FIGHTING FOR YOU

Need Immigration legal support?

The United States is a country of immigrants, and a nation that values families and workers who contribute to society. When it comes to applying for an immigration visa, a foreign citizen must be sponsored by a qualifying family member or employer who will file a petition with U.S. Citizen and Immigration Services (USCIS) on their behalf. Because the petition process can be a confusing and challenging process, ensuring accuracy and taking the right steps is critical to being approved.

Joey Gilbert Law offers legal support and services for foreign citizens in employment and family immigration

Family-Based Immigration Petitions

Family-based immigration allows certain eligible family members to petition on behalf of relatives who want to obtain immigrant visas that allow them to live and work in the United States. There are two groups of family-based immigrant visa categories: (1) Immediate Relatives and (2) Family Preference.

Immediate Relative Immigrant Visas

These visas involve a U.S. Citizen who sponsors an immediate relative (IR), which may include:

- Spouse
- Unmarried son or daughter under 21
- Orphan adopted abroad (or to be adopted in U.S.)
- Parent

Family preference visas allow non-immediate relatives of U.S. Citizens, as well as certain family members of Lawful Permanent Residents (a green-card holder), to file a petition for immigration. These include:

- F1 – Unmarried son or daughter (over 21) of U.S. Citizen, and their minor children
- F2 – Spouse, minor child, and unmarried son or daughter (over 21) of green card holder
- F3 – Married son or daughter of U.S. Citizen, and their spouse / minor children
- F4 – Brother or sister of U.S. citizen (at least 21), and their minor children
